Treasurer's Pooled Investment Fund

Quarterly Commentary

Trade Winds

The period was marked by a populist anti-euro government elected in Italy, the denuclearization summit in Singapore, and escalating trade tensions. Yet, the US economy continues its second-longest expansion in history and the FED is adjusting policy accordingly, having already raised rates twice in 2018 with many expecting two more rate hikes this year.

Trade tensions are threatening to boil over to a trade war. Triggered by US-levied aluminum and steel tariffs, the US and its trading partners have made escalating threats to impose tariffs against one another. Negotiators from the US, Mexico, and Canada have not reached an agreement on NAFTA and it remains unclear whether the three nations will strike an accord.

At the end of 1Q18, the US levied respective 10 and 25-percent tariffs against aluminum and steel imports from all but a few nations. Tariff exemptions were lifted soon after being imposed and on June 5, Mexico imposed $3 billion in tariffs against the US; on June 21, Turkey imposed $267 million worth of tariffs; on June 22, the European Union imposed tariffs on $3 billion worth of goods. Starting July 1, Canada promised to impose tariffs against the US worth $13 billion and India announced they would levy tariffs worth $241 million beginning August 4.

So far, the US has threatened additional tariffs on more than $200 billion worth of Chinese goods. China has matched tariff threats, and promises to impose alternative measures of retaliation if the US keeps on its path.

FED Chair J. Powell acknowledges risks associated with trade disputes, but down-plays their negative effects to the US economy so far by stating, "We don't really see it in the numbers." Estimates of the effects of trade disputes on the US economy range from "not very sizable" to diminishing US GDP in the long run by 3.5% in the event of a trade war, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

For 2Q18, US economic growth remains strong with leading indicators forecasting steady growth. Real GDP growth YoY is at 2%, the labor market displays strong growth with job gains averaging 223K in 2Q18 and the lowest U-3 unemployment rate since November 2000 at 3.8%, and key inflationary figures are in line with the FED's symmetric two-percent target rate.

Second quarter, to date, has seen treasury yields climb as investors anticipated the Fed's second 25-basis-point rate hike for 2018, which took place on June 13. With this hike, the Fed Funds rate now stands at 2.00%. During the quarter, 2-yr. treasury yields rose from 2.25 to 2.56 and 5-yr. yields rose from 2.55 to 2.74. With economic fundamentals showing continued strength (e.g. annualized vehicle sales hovering near 17 million and new home sales at 689K), bond investors are expecting a third 25-basis-point Fed Funds hike on September 26 and a possible fourth 25-basis-point hike on December 19.

Whether trade disputes meaningfully interfere with economic activity remains to be seen. In any case, the Treasurer's Pooled Investment Fund is committed to capitalizing on rising rates and is well positioned for market changes.
